From the Desk of HOD and Convener

Climate change is a defining issue of our time and we are at the defining moment. Around the world, people are experiencing both the subtle and stark effects of climate change which is moving faster than we are. We are experiencing record breaking temperatures around the world. According to the World Meteorological Association, the past two decades was the warmest year since 1850. Gradually shifting weather patterns, rising sea levels and more extreme weather events such as violent storms, wildfires, drought, heavier rainfall, rapid melting of polar ice caps are all clear and devastating evidence of a rapidly changing climate. They're creating unprecedented challenges for millions of people. The increased frequency and intensity of extreme weather events threaten the world's food supply, drive people from their homes, separate families and jeopardize livelihoods. And all of these effects increase the risk of conflict, hunger and poverty. Visible evidence and climbing numbers demonstrate that climate change is not a distant or imaginary threat, but rather a growing and undeniable reality. There is no doubt the emergency of this crisis.

The main goal of organizing this webinar is to enhance our knowledge about the challenges we are and will be going to face due to climate change and the need for provision of resilient adaptive strategies suitable to some specific communities as the victims of climate change.

Dr. Nafisa Banu
Assistant Professor Department of Geography

Webinar Introduction

Webinar introduction was delivered by Dr. Nafisa Banu, Convener of the Webinar and Head of the Department of Geography, Dukhulal Nibaran Chandra College. She emphasizes in her introductory speech that climate change is a defining issue of our time and we are now at the defining moment of gradually shifting weather patterns, rising sea levels and more extreme weather events such as violent storms, wildfires, drought, heavier rainfall, rapid melting of polar ice caps are all the effects of Climate Change. These events threaten the world's food supply, drive people from their homes, separate families and jeopardize livelihoods. She also pointed out the examples of devastating impacts of climate change in different places around the world including India. She also elaborated the aim and objectives of the webinar.

Dr. Nafisa Banu also addressed more than 700 participants who have registered from different universities in India and also abroad in the Webinar.

Welcome Address

The welcome address was delivered by Dr. Madhab Kumar Biswas, Lecturer-in Charge of the College. He extended a warm welcome to resource persons and all the participants present in the webinar. He appreciates the convener of the webinar, Dr. Nafisa Banu for conducting such a nice webinar. He was quite delighted and expressed his ecstasy of joy and happiness to see the galaxy of faculty members, research scholars present in the webinar from different universities of India and also abroad.

Technical Session I

Ms. Deblina Ghosal, Co-convenor and Assistant Professor of the Department of Geography introduced our resource person Dr. Giasuddin Siddique, Professor, Department of Geography, University of Burdwan.

Dr. Giasuddin Siddique, Resource person and Professor of Department of Geography has delivered his valuable speech on the topic of “Climate Change: Variable Impact and Resilient adaptation Strategies” .

He emphasized that the planet Earth has experienced changes in its climate many times before and after the formation of its biosphere. The effects of the past differential climates are documented in geological time scales indicative of appearance and disappearance of species extinct today. Changes in earth's orbit, solar variations, volcanic eruption, ocean currents and internal variability of energy have always been active as natural causes of climate change. The prime sources that contribute greenhouse gases to the atmosphere are burning of fossil fuels, deforestation, increasing livestock farming, nitrogenous fertilizers and CFCs, the utilization of which have economic as well as political dimensions.

Professor Siddique mentioned that adaptation to the impact wielded by global climate change in near future will be extremely difficult and costly. The skills and capital essentials to handle the situation would be beyond affordability of the poor communities living the most inconvenient ecotones, waiting to be turned into ecological refugees. His discussion had its main focus on the impacts of climate change in some specific global, continental, national and local regions and the need for provision of resilient adaptive strategies suitable to some specific communities as the victims of climate change.

Technical session ended with a fruitful interactive question and answer session which was open to all. Ms. Deblina Ghosal beautifully hosted the interactive session.

Technical Session: II

Dr. Nafisa Banu, Convener and Assistant Professor of the Department of Geography introduced resource person Dr. Chinmay Mallik, Assistant Professor of the Department of Atmospheric Science, Central University of Rajasthan.

Photo: Dr. Nafisa Banu, Convener, Assistant Professor of Department of Geography introducing Resource Person Dr. Chinmay Mallik

Dr. Chinmay Mallik introduced the Amazons as the world's continuous largest tropical forest which sustains over 50% of the plant and animal species on the Earth's surface. Despite being a region with highest biodiversity, the fertility of these rainforests is the bounty of a desert region on the opposite side of the Atlantic ocean! The Amazon functions as the lungs of our planet and controls the cleanliness of the global air through copious hydrocarbon emissions. The Amazon makes its own clouds; the biomass burning aerosols over there have intrinsic relationships with the cloud layers over these rainforests.

Dr. Chinmay Mallik elaborated that the increasing threats from human induced climate change have serious implications to the life of long living trees over the Amazons. The climatic feedbacks have resulted in increased climatic forcing e.g. increased emissions of greenhouse gas Methane due to increased surface temperature which will further lead to an increase in temperature! He emphasizes the relevance of the Amazons to the earth's climate and the various research activities. He visited the Amazon Rainforest and shared practical experiences including a 300 meter tower right in the middle of the forests, going on in partnership between agencies in Brazil and Germany.

Technical session was followed by an interactive question and answer session which was open to all. Dr. Nafisa Banu beautifully hosted the interactive session.

Vote of Thanks

Photo: Dr. Amitlal Bhattacharya, IQAC Co-ordinator and Assistant Professor of Dukhulal Nibaran Chandra Presenting a vote of thanks

Dr. Amitlal Bhattacharya, IQAC Co-ordinator and Assistant Professor of Dukhulal Nibaran Chandra presented vote of thanks nicely. He extended thanks to two resource persons of the Webinar Professor Giasuddin Siddique from the University of Burdwan and Dr.Chinmay Mallik from Central University of Rajasthan for their valuable lectures. He conveyed his gratitude to Lecturer-in-Charge of the college Dr. Madhab Kumar Biswas. He congratulated the convener of the webinar, Dr. Nafisa Banu and said that it was the result of hard efforts of Dr. Nafisa Banu, who could convene such a programme in a very lucid way. He also presented vote of thanks to co-convener Ms. Deblina Ghosal, organizing committee, all the faculty members, research scholars, participants, non-teaching staff and everyone who were present in the webinar in making this a grand success.
